SECTION - A

Q1 Read the passage given below.

- (1) The Syrian civil war is an ongoing multi-sided civil war in Syria fought between the Syrian Arab Republic led by Syrian president Bashar al-Assad, supported by domestic and foreign allies, and various domestic and foreign forces that oppose both the Syrian government and each other, in varying combinations.
- (2) Socio-economic inequality increased significantly after free market policies were initiated by Hafez al-Assad in his later years, and it accelerated after Bashar al-Assad came to power. With an emphasis on the service sector, these policies benefited a minority of the nation's population, mostly people who had connections with the government, and members of the Sunni merchant class of Damascus and Aleppo. The country also faced particularly high youth unemployment rates. At the start of the war, discontent against the government was strongest in Syria's poor areas. This coincided with the most intense drought ever recorded in Syria, which lasted from 2006 to 2011 and resulted in widespread crop failure, an increase in food prices and a mass migration of farming families to urban centres.
- (3) Unrest in Syria began on 15 March 2011 as part of the wider 2011 Arab Spring protests out of discontent with the Syrian government, eventually escalating to an armed conflict after protests calling for Assad's removal were violently suppressed. The war is currently being fought by several factions. The Syrian Armed Forces and its domestic and international allies represent the Syrian Arab Republic and the Assad regime. Opposed to it is the Syrian Interim Government, a big-tent alliance of pro democratic, nationalist opposition groups. Iran, Russia, and Hezbollah, the Lebanese Shia Islamist political party, support the Syrian Arab Republic. The U.S.-led international coalition, established in 2014 with the declared purpose of countering ISIL, has conducted airstrikes primarily against ISIL as well as some against government and pro-government targets.
- (4) The war has resulted in an estimated 600,000 deaths, making the Syrian civil war the second deadliest conflict of the 21st century after the Second Congo War. International organizations have accused virtually all sides involved, the Assad regime, ISIL, opposition groups, Iran, Russia, Turkey, and the U.S.-led coalition of severe human rights violations and massacres.

Q2 Read the passage carefully:

Every single day, in over 80 countries worldwide, more than 11500 ICRC field staffs are making a difference to people facing the consequences of conflict and violence. An independent and neutral organization, the ICRC is financed mainly by donations from government, national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies, supranational organizations

(such as the European Commission), regional organisations, municipal authorities, the private sector and members of the public. All funding is voluntary.

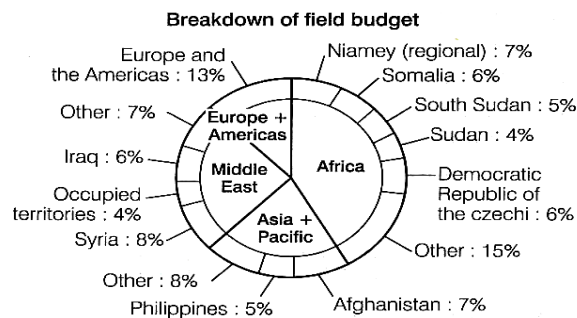

The ICRC's activities are based on assessments done by teams on the ground of the needs of people in its operations worldwide. Donors contribute according to these needs and have the opportunity to specify which country or programme they want to support when making a donation; however, it cannot accept donations for a specific school, village, project, groups of individuals or a specific area in a country.

At the end of each year, ICRC launches two budget appeals to convert its activities in the field and the headquarters during the coming year.

Apart from this, annual emergency appeals alert donors to the suffering of millions of people and show what it is doing to help these people, build their resilience and prevent further violations of their rights.

The ICRC does not wait to receive funds before it responds to urgent needs in the field, and counts on the goodwill of its contributors to provide the funds as quickly as possible. The ICRC's annual budget in recent years has been in the region of one billion Swiss francs. The ICRC accounts for its funding and expenditure in its annual report, which is available to the public.

Since its inception in 1863, the ICRC traditionally dealt with states. After World War II, there was a rise in non-international armed conflicts (civil wars) and internal violence. Consequently, in line with its role as a neutral, impartial humanitarian actor which is in dialogue with all parties in situations of armed conflict, the ICRC started engaging with non-state bodies such as armed groups and other actors like NGOs.
