With his eyes tightly shut, he yawned and stretched his body tiredly. A moment later, he heard a scream from the floor. It was his mother. "Mohit, it is nine thirty," she shouted.

At once, he jumped out of the bed. He hurriedly grabbed his bag and shoved the books in it. Then, he swiftly slipped out of his pyjamas and into his pants and shirt. He reached out for his shoes, and fled out the door. The next moment, he was in the kitchen pouring some milk into a tumbler. Quickly, he grabbed a sandwich and dashed out of the door.

- A. Mohit is scared.
- B. Mohit is busy doing different things.
- C. Mohit is in a hurry to reach somewhere.
- D. None of the above

Q.3. Read the story. Then put the events in order.

There's an Alien in My Locker!

The day after the meteor fell outside of town, it was all that anyone could talk about. But Tom wasn't interested. What was the big deal? He hadn't been able to watch his favourite television show the night before because all of the stations were covering the meteor. He hadn't slept well because his parents were getting phone calls from their friends all night. And now here he was at school, the bell was just about to ring, and he couldn't get his locker open. The bell rang, and the last few students who were lingering in the halls darted into their classrooms. Doors slammed. Suddenly the hallway was empty, and Tom was alone. Frustrated, Tom banged on his locker. And something banged back. Tom jumped back in surprise. Before he could think of a good explanation for the banging, his locker door burst open and there, on top of his books and his dirty gym uniform, was a little green alien.
