We have often heard the proverb, 'Honesty is the Best Policy'. Honesty is a value that one must inculcate from a young age. As children, we often tell lies and are punished by our parents. At that age we may not understand why our parents are strict with us. However, as we grow older, we realise that it was meant for our well-being. Truth, however difficult it may be, takes us a long way. Falsehood, though easy and convenient, punishes us in the end. Often, to support one lie, people lie repeatedly. Even if they feel guilty, they fail to be brave enough to speak the truth. One must never fall back on lies. No matter how difficult the situation, honesty is a virtue and we must always practise it.
